WELLReview

On-site health education is one of our most highly-rated biometric screening options. We also provide a telephonic option to make health education accessible for all biometric screening participants.

What is WELLReview?

WCS registered dietitians work with participants telephonically for approximately fifteen minutes. In this short but impactful session, health educators engage participants in a confidential one-on-one conversation to review results, promote risk awareness, inspire motivation for action, and help set specific goals that will reduce risk for disease over time.

How are sessions scheduled?

After their screening results have been processed, participants receive an email with information about scheduling an appointment for telephonic health education. Appointments can be made online, or by phone through our Customer Care team.

What screening programs are eligible?

Clients who use any of the following screening services will have the option of adding telephonic health education to their program:

- On-site biometric screenings (venipuncture)
- Screening vouchers or Primary Care Physician Forms
- At-home test kits

How do you start WELLReview?

For an additional fee, telephonic health education can be added to any of the screening services listed above. To discuss adding this service to your existing screening program, contact our Sales Team or your WCS Program Manager.
